INTRODUCTION

The Department of Social Sciences of the University of Puerto Rico, Mayagüez Campus is currently searching for candidates to teach in the areas of Environmental Sociology, Quantitative Methods and Political Science, as well as research, particularly multidisciplinary.

MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS

Have completed a Doctorate in Philosophy and Letters (PhD), from an accredited university at the time of hiring and be committed to undergraduate teaching in the context of the disciplines of Social Sciences. The person recruited, in addition to having experience and interest in research and quantitative methodology, must demonstrate research experience and willingness to carry out research in one or more of the following areas: environmental sociology, environmental public policy, public policy, planning and international relations. In turn, the geographic areas are those of interest in the sociological, political, or historical spheres of Puerto Rico, the Caribbean, and/or Europe. The candidate is required to demonstrate experience in teaching and to be able to offer courses in the Social Sciences.

Must be able to work in a multidisciplinary environment. In addition, you must demonstrate a history of publications in peer-reviewed, professional journals, and other scholarly publications. Have experience in the use of technology for the development of presential, hybrid and distance courses. Demonstrate ability in the preparation of proposals subsidized with external funds for their research, interdisciplinary, multidisciplinary or collaborative projects. Demonstrate excellent oral and written communication skills in Spanish and English.

JOB DESCRIPTION AND DUTIES

The responsibilities of the faculty include teaching courses at the undergraduate level, carrying out research projects and creative work, publishing articles in professional and academic journals, disseminating their work through conferences and other forums, mentoring undergraduate students, participating in departmental and institutional committees. In addition, in service-learning projects with Puerto Rican communities. The recruited person is expected to develop research projects together with the work teams of the Center for Applied Social Research (CISA) and/or the Interdisciplinary Center for Coastal Studies (CIEL).

HOW TO APPLY

Interested persons must send their curriculum vitae, official transcripts of graduate and undergraduate studies, research and teaching plans, a list of at least three (3) references from professionals in the area and three (3) letters of reference from peers in the professional area to:
