About the Graduate Research and Innovation Center

Graduate Research and Innovation Center @ UPRM General Library

It is a creative space for collaboration and innovation, where all the graduate students and faculty can gather together to develop projects and receive specialized research services in scholarly communication, research methodology and data management.

Mission
To facilitate research services and support graduate education among faculty and students of the University of Puerto Rico at Mayagüez.

Objectives

- to assist users from a plurality of disciplines and fields of study in every stage of the research process.
- to provide specialized assistance for professors, graduate students, and researchers on topics of interest, technology use, and the development of research projects.
- to provide a technological infrastructure that supports different methods of interaction and promotes multidisciplinary collaborative work.
- to support the specific needs of graduate students regarding the design, development and analysis of their research.
- to provide specialized services on data management, scholarly communication, and research methodologies.

Services

The services provided by GRIC aim to support all stages of the research process, including the publication and dissemination of academic work by UPRM graduate students, faculty and researchers. These will be applied from the various stages of The Research Lifecycle, as summarized in the following model:

LibGuide
