Overview

This call focuses on the domain of entrepreneurship education, with a strong interest in a variety of methodological approaches and spanning interests in teaching, research and practice. We encourage submissions that emphasize unique and novel insights that will support and advance the field of entrepreneurship education. The call is not bound to any particular definition, level of entrepreneurship education, or academic discipline. We hope that scholars from a variety of fields will respond to this call with groundbreaking theoretical, empirical and applied research. Suggested topics/themes may include, but are not limited to:

- New definitions and models of entrepreneurship education
- Ethical and philosophical considerations in entrepreneurship education – inclusive of pedagogy and practice
- Different approaches to entrepreneurship education drawing across disciplines, education levels, countries, cultures
- Pedagogical foundations and applications of entrepreneurship education
- Advances in entrepreneurship education and pedagogy in non-business-related fields
- Entrepreneurship education in co-curricular and non-traditional learning environments
- Entrepreneurship education to develop life-long learning skills
- Entrepreneurship education as an economic and workforce development tool
- Novel research methods in entrepreneurship education (e.g. action research, experiments)

Authors of papers that receive a first-round revise and resubmit are required to register and attend the 2018 USASBE Conference in Los Angeles, CA to both present their paper and meet with the Guest Editors.
