INTRODUCTION

The Department of Computer Science and Engineering (CSE) is seeking candidates for the position of Assistant Professor. In addition to its graduate program, the CSE Department has undergraduate programs with high demand and growth potential in the College of Engineering. The faculty in its graduate program conducts research projects and have access to excellent research funding mechanisms from the United States federal government, and private industry.

MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS

Applicants must have earned a Ph.D. in Computer Science, Software Engineering, Computer Engineering, or a related field at the beginning of the appointment and demonstrate high potential for excellence in research and teaching. The candidate must demonstrate experience or potential to conduct research in one or more of the following areas: 1) Cybersecurity, 2) Machine Learning and Data Analytics, 3) Cloud Computing and Edge Systems, 4) Software Verification, and 5) Software Deployment and Continuous Integration. Other areas of research in the Computing field may also be considered depending on the other qualifications of the candidate. Priority will be given to candidates in the area of Cybersecurity, with expertise in the development of secure software, intelligence and analysis of vulnerabilities and intrusion detection, threats detection and management, information privacy and security, design of secure communication protocols, resilience, disaster recovery and continuity of operations.

Among candidates that meet the previous credentials, bilingualism (Spanish and English) would be considered a valued-added asset.

JOB DESCRIPTION

The successful candidate is expected to publish research work in peer review conferences and journals, advise graduate students, attract external funding for research and laboratory improvement, and teach undergraduate and graduate courses. Also, the candidate must participate in faculty committees, continuous improvement and assessment activities, outreach activities, and support general service in the department.

HOW TO APPLY
